

Mid-year hood-release latches and cables

Left side (drvr) hood release latch.

I ran a "fail-safe cable" through the firewall alongside the grommet for the hood-release cable. The cable is connected to drilled piece of 1/2" aluminum rod with cable crimps on both sides. The cable is tucked up under the dash out of sight and with a little luck will never be needed. But ...

Right side (psgr) hood latch and release cable. Note the extra brass cable stop for insurance. This cable connects at the top of the left-side latch and is activated when the hood release cable is pulled. If the cable disconnects at this point, you have to somehow reach up and push the lever forward to release the catch.

